Permanent Link to u-blox, Rohde & Schwarz Successfully Simulate Galileo with u-blox Platform

2021/06/11

u-blox and Rohde & Schwarz (R&S), a supplier of test and measurement equipment, have successfully concluded a simulation of the European Galileo satellite positioning system. The test, carried out with the R&S SMBV100A vector signal generator and its GNSS simulation options, verified the u-blox proof-of-concept and the compatibility of u-blox receiver technology with the Galileo transmission protocol. The cooperation with R&S is also being extended to the Russian GLONASS satellite system, which is targeted to be fully operational with 24 satellites in 2012. "Our close cooperation with R&S has proven to be a valuable and strategic asset, allowing us to develop advanced satellite receiver technology well before the actual satellites are available" said Clemens Bürgi, vice president of software development at u-blox. "u-blox, with its depth of expertise in GNSS technologies, has helped us to validate our satellite simulator technology," said Andreas Pauly, head of R&D Signal Generators Baseband at Rohde & Schwarz. "Now we have developed cutting-edge test equipment that simulates the protocol and physical layer."
